Review:

Book contains a collection of editorials of the Hsin hua She and the Tung-pei J'h-pao, and decisions of CCP committees in Northeast China on agricultural production. Articles by Ch'en Po-ta and Ch'en Chung entitled "No Need to Disrupt Existing Business Enterprises" and "How to Lead Agricultural Production."

Book is divided into four sections. Section I deals with agricultural production and how it can be increased. Section II discusses the development of industrial production including management problems and the democratization of management. Section III covers reforms in transportation, particularly rail transportation in North and Northeast China. The "system of fixed responsibility in production." Section IV deals with market controls and state enterprises, giving several cases of market manipulation by private enterprises.

Contains case studies in management reforms, "fixed responsibility system" and incentive system in industry.
